

SPAN 4520: Spain in Context

Instructor: Dr. Rafael Lamas

Focusing on the relationship between creativity and society in Granada, this course explores Spain's diversity through literature and culture. In addition to the virtual class component, the course includes virtual cultural visits and workshops on a variety of topics. Students will work in groups towards a final project which will be a journal article ready for publication in the on-line magazine Por Granada. The project will involve online research in Granada, including interviews with locals.

The course is offered in conjunction with the Fordham in Granada study abroad program. A recognized World Heritage Site by UNESCO, Granada is one of the most beautiful cities in the world. It is the hometown of Federico García Lorca, and a center of flamenco culture. The Alhambra Palace, the Albaicín neighborhood, the Cathedral, and the numerous Baroque churches of the city are testimonies of the city's rich past, which continues to be alive through its vibrant university community.

This course is a Latin American and Latino Studies, Communications and Media Studies, Journalism, and Peace and Justice Studies Major or Minor Course and satisfies the Interdisciplinary Capstone Course core requirement at Fordham University.
