

Upper-Level Spring 2021 Schedule Memo

You should consult this memo as you build your class schedule. It contains important information about the format of the Spring 2021 academic program. The schedule was designed with primary concern for the health and well-being of our community and excellence across the academic program.

Please note:

- Classes will begin on January 19, 2021.
- Registration will begin on January 4, 2021 at 7:00 a.m. each day. As usual, it will continue through the drop/add period ending January 25, 2021.
- We are planning to open the building for a limited number of classes, but if the public health restrictions change, all classes will be held online.
- Assuming we are open in person, courses will be conducted in different formats. You must select the type of format in the schedule to view available courses. The schedule codes courses as follows:
 - In Person: Class will generally meet in the building.
 - Online: Class will never meet in the building.
 - Hybrid: Class will meet both in-person and online, in person one day per week and online another day.
- Please choose the format and timing that works best for you. If you do not want to come into the building, make sure to register exclusively for online only courses. All students who are registered for in-person and hybrid courses will be expected to attend the in-person component of the course.
- Before the start of classes, each course description on LawNET will contain a notation about the amount, if any, of asynchronous content in the course as well as the instructor's recording policy for students who must miss classes for pandemic related reasons.
- All spring exams will be administered remotely, according to the posted exam schedule.
- There is a reservation system for studying in designated classrooms and the library, which has a significantly reduced capacity.
- Make sure to schedule your in-person and online classes with enough time in between to allow you to travel between school and home, although there is limited space in the building to take an online class. Use the reservation system to book one of these spaces. Please note that you are not guaranteed a spot.
- The normal grading system will be applicable for all classes and all students.
- At the direction of the university, state, or city, we will shift to all-remote learning if necessary to protect public health.
