Eligibility for loan forgiveness under the Fordham Loan Forgiveness Program is determined on the basis of two factors: (1) full-time employment in a qualifying occupational area, and (2) meeting the income eligibility requirements under the Program. There is an ancillary right of participation in the Program for those Fordham graduates who are employed as judicial clerks. During the clerkship period, no interest will accrue and no payments need be made on the graduate's Fordham Revolving loans, provided the graduate's income does not exceed the maximum income level for participation in the Program.

The maximum qualifying income will be increased annually for inflation and career progression.

This application must be accompanied by:

- (1) a completed Employer Certification Form for both the applicant and spouse, if married;
- (2) copies of billing statements for all spouse's certifiable loans to be included in the maximum income calculation. Billing statements must indicate the number of monthly installments to be made in 2016 and the amount of each installment.

The Program Year runs from January 1 through December 31. Applicants are admitted into the Program effective at the beginning of the next Program year. There is no provision for mid-year admission. However, an exception will be made for graduates who obtain their first qualifying employment after the November 1st application deadline. Graduates have three years from the date of their graduation to apply for this Program. Applications, which include all required documentation, must be submitted between September 1 and November 1 prior to the year in which the applicant wishes to be admitted into the program. Continuation in the Program will depend upon maintaining eligibility and timely submission of re-certification forms. Judicial clerks must be re-certified annually.

Applications may be mailed to: Mrs. Kathleen Keenan
Loan Forgiveness Program Administrator
