Children & Families Scholars
Children and Families Institute for Research, Support and Training

Fordham University
Graduate School of Social Service
INTRODUCTION

A successful applicant for the Children and Families Scholars is a student who has a commitment to academic excellence, is seeking to gain leadership skills, and has a specific interest in working upon graduation with children and families in Westchester County.

The Children and Families scholarship program will provide advanced year Fordham University MSW students interested in working with children and their families in Westchester County with the opportunity to receive a scholarship. This opportunity is dependent on future funding of the Scholars Program.

ELIGIBILITY

In order to be eligible for the scholarship, applicants must:

- Be entering the advanced year of MSW study at Fordham University’s Graduate School of Social Service in Westchester in September;
- Have received a minimum 3.75 or better GPA in their Foundation year of the MSW program or have been granted advanced standing status and received a minimum 3.5 GPA in social work courses during the BSW program;
- Be interested in a field placement at an agency in Westchester County providing services to children or adolescents and their families; and
- Plan to work in Westchester County for an agency providing services to children/adolescents and their families upon graduation.

PROGRAM COMPONENTS

The Children and Families Scholars program encompasses a range of components in which students are expected to participate:

- Be placed at an internship in Westchester County
- Help to organize and plan an annual conference that brings together Westchester County leaders, students, and members of the social work community to examine cutting edge issues in services to children, youth, and their families.
- Plan a presentation for the annual conference
Field Placement

The Children and Families Scholars program will provide eligible students with the opportunity to be placed at a Westchester-based agency that provides services to children, adolescents and their families. Some examples of the placements available include:

- A Westchester-based residential treatment center that provides individual, group, and family services, as well as educational and recreation services, to children and adolescents suffering from the impact of child abuse and neglect.
- A Westchester-based mental health center that provides comprehensive counseling services to children, adolescents and their families.
- A program engaged in the design and implementation of a cross-systems, community-based approach to meeting the multiple needs of seriously emotionally disturbed children and their families.
- An in-patient mental health program for adolescents and latency age children.
- A family program for children and families served by the public child welfare system in Westchester County that evaluates goals of permanency, safety and child well-being.

About Children and Families

The Children and Families Institute for Research Support and Training (Children and Families) was created in 1988 and is part of Fordham University’s Graduate School of Social Service. Its mission is to support families and protect children through the advancement of practice skills and knowledge. This mission is operationalized through the provision of training, research, and supportive services to the public and private non-profit agencies that deliver social services to children and Families. The Institute’s activities range from in-service training and staff development to organizational consultation and professional development activities.
