This course is an exploration of the contemporary analytic debates regarding the nature of time and ontological persistence, with special focus on the relationship between the human person and time. It will include overviews of standard theories of time and persistence, as well as exploring questions about our freedom and ability to affect or change temporal ontology (and whether it matters).