Fordham Scholarships

Fordham Law has funding available for graduate students. The admissions committee awards partial scholarships to select LLM and MSL applicants based on merit. There is no separate application process for these scholarships; they are awarded at the sole discretion of the admissions committee during their review of completed applications. Priority consideration is given to those with applications completed by the early scholarship deadline: February 1 (fall) and September 21 (spring). Graduate program staff will notify applicants if they have been selected for a merit scholarship award.

Fordham Law also offers a scholarship through the Leitner Center for International Law and Justice. This scholarship is restricted to a select few highly qualified LLM candidates in international human rights. For application information, including the application deadline, please visit <http://leitnercenter.org/programs/VLGSLLM/>.

External Scholarships and Resources

You are encouraged to seek additional sources of funding. Our office has gathered together a list of external scholarships and resources that may be relevant to LLM and/or MSL students. You are encouraged to use this list as a starting place in your search.

Cost of Attendance

Fordham Law School's Office of Financial Aid website contains the most up-to-date information about tuition, fees, and other expenses you can expect to pay as a law student at Fordham.

Tuition Payment

Tuition invoices are mailed to students prior to the start of each semester and will also be posted to students' my.fordham.edu accounts. Students are expected to check their accounts regularly and make sure that tuition payments are made on time. Students who do not pay their tuition on time will be assessed late charges by the University.

Any questions about tuition or billing should be directed to the Enrollment Services Office at 212-636-6700 or at studentaccts@fordham.edu.

Fordham University offers a monthly tuition payment plan administered by Tuition Management Systems (TMS).
